Dear Hiring team

When I say I am a Software Engineer is more than a job title. What I do matters I do not just write code, I build software that changes people's lives and that is a huge responsibility. If you think for a minute about the peoples who use the software I build... They put trust in me.

When I was at university I excel academically, especially in technical programming. after school, I continue to take online classes on the topic such as data structure and system design to improve my skills. I am dedicated to learning more when given a chance. Quality of software is the heart of every line of code that I write. I always write software that:

o works - The program does the task that is design to do o can be modified - I make sure that my code is easy to read, understand or change
o reusable - I apply object-oriented design so that it will be easy to use part of the program to another program

When I was at university I took multiple Udemy courses to supplement my school with React, Express brings joy to me. I am good at programming, I didn't limit myself to one programing language that was thought in my class which is c++, I took extra time to learn multiple programming languages such as Python, Go, and typescript. Now I am in the process of learning rust. I have a good grasp of working with modern tools such as Git and cloud computing. My favorite tool is the bash scripting language because it allows me to automate a lot of my work

I have been using Vodacom ever since my first phone and I really enjoy how reliable it is even in rural areas. My favourite service from Vodacom was Vodacom Millionaires. I used to play it every week, every Vodacom customer used to get two free entries to play. I've won airtime multiple times from Vodacom Millionaire. I know that with the opportunity to fully invest myself in this career I would be able to become a great software developer in your team.
